

Getting help with your workspace

Aster Services provides managed customer-support workspaces for regional retailers. This guide explains how to report a search problem, protect customer information, and follow a service interruption. It applies to workspace administrators and authorized partner reviewers.

Report a support-search problem

For a support-search interruption, include the workspace name, time of the failed search, and the case reference. Do not attach customer messages or an export of search results. The support desk acknowledges urgent interruptions within 30 minutes and posts progress every hour until searches are restored.

Priority	Example	First response
Urgent	All users cannot search support cases	30 minutes
High	One team cannot find recent cases	2 business hours
Normal	A saved search needs adjustment	1 business day

Send only the information needed

Use a case reference such as AST-4821 and describe the expected result. Crop screenshots to remove names, email addresses, and message previews. If a secure attachment is needed, support will provide an upload link limited to the people handling your case.

Where to follow an interruption

The workspace service-status panel carries customer updates. Your case owner will confirm the next update time even when there is no new finding. A resolution notice describes customer impact and the steps needed to resume normal work.

Support hours: Monday to Friday, 08:00–18:00 UTC. Urgent workspace outages are monitored outside these hours. Contact: support@aster.example.

AS-CS-014 · Customer Support Guide · 25 September 2026

Workspace access and service recovery

Choose the correct workspace

Sign in through your organization’s Gluu identity service, then choose the workspace named in your support agreement. Partner reviewers use their own accounts. Do not share sign-in links or copy another organization’s case references into a search.

During a search interruption

Continue recording new cases in the normal intake form. Keep the original case references and avoid submitting duplicate cases. Support will confirm when recent records are searchable again; the customer-service team should then check a known case before resuming saved-search reports.

Action	Who handles it
Request a new workspace member	Your workspace administrator
Report a missing support case	Your named case owner
Request a copy of your organization’s cases	Your contract contact
Remove a departing partner reviewer	Your workspace administrator

What a recovery notice contains

Aster’s recovery notice includes the interruption window, affected customer function, restoration time, and any customer action. Internal investigation notes and other customers’ records are not included. For the 12 September search interruption, the customer notice confirms that indexing was restored and asks administrators to check recent case visibility.

Close the support case

Reply to the case owner once the expected search results are visible. If the problem remains, provide the case reference and the time of the latest attempt. Aster retains the support case for 90 days after closure under the support agreement.